

FNP Admission Essay Guidelines

Mercy University educates family nurse practitioners (FNPs) to deliver primary care to diverse populations residing in diverse economic communities. In addition, FNPs need to be cognizant of factors that contribute to the health status of their patients. These factors are social determinants of health (SDH).

In 500 words (place the word count at the top of the essay under your name), respond to the following (be as specific as possible):

Family Nurse Practitioners (FNPs) are vital to the delivery of primary care. In this essay, discuss the role of the FNP in providing comprehensive, patient-centered primary care across the lifespan. Explain how social determinants of health impact the FNP's ability to deliver effective care and promote health equity.

Describe how your education at Mercy University will prepare you to address these challenges and enhance your clinical practice. Finally, outline your professional goals after graduation and how you plan to contribute to improving primary care outcomes in your community or chosen population.

Presentation is an important component of this essay. We consider the ability to answer the essay questions, use graduate level writing, correct grammar, correct spelling, appropriate word choices, appropriate tenses, and adherence to directions as indicators of your ability to communicate effectively and professionally.
